Literacy Corner

March 20th is the Spring Equinox, the event that marks the astronomical first day in the Northern Hemisphere. If you're used to the equinox being on March 21st, get used to a new day. The equinox is not going to occur on March 21 until the year 2102.

After the dark chill of winter, it's impossible not to be excited about welcoming spring's arrival. Share these spring books to celebrate new growth and all the fun that longer, warmer days can bring.

In this well-written and illustrated book, little Sophie wants to know how she will recognize spring when it comes.

The Spring Book captures a variety of moments that encompasses this season.

Tim Hopgood's cheerful illustrations are the perfect accompaniment to the lyrics of the classic song by Freed and Brown. Because really, what better way to welcome spring than with a rainbow's worth of galoshes, bright umbrellas, and splash-worthy puddles?

Indigenous Education

Coyote Tales

a Book by Thomas King

Thomas King is a well-known Indigenous author who has received numerous awards for his writing, including the Governor General's Literary Award for The Back of the Turtle. King's Coyote Tales tells two fun stories children will enjoy, either as a read-aloud, or to read on their own. One of King's stories tells the tale of what happened when Moon became annoyed with Coyote, and the other tells how Coyote stole the clothes (coats) of the animals in the forest.

March Reading Challenge

How it works:

Grab a BINGO reading card from Mrs. Rankin in the library.

Like Bingo, they have to complete a line [read the book AND do an AR test on that book] and can pass in the BINGO card once one line is done. They will receive a pencil, eraser or little prize for completing the line. (there is a blank space on each bingo card for them to choose a book for themselves - please ask them to write the name of the book in that space)

IF students would like to complete the entire BINGO sheet, they can pass it in by Wednesday, March 31st to Mrs. Rankin (with their name and grade on the card) to be entered into a draw for some great books and other prizes.
